

CASIO presents Privia PX-S1000 digital piano in red

PX-S1000RD

Norderstedt/ Nashville, 18 July 2019 – To mark Privia's fifteenth anniversary, CASIO is extending its PX-S series to include another digital piano model which will leave a lasting impression: the PX-S1000. This model will also be available in luminescent red from your music shop in the future. Visitors to Summer NAMM in Nashville (18 to 20 July) will be the very first to have the chance to peek at the new addition to the Privia series.

With the new PX-S models, CASIO has returned to its original Privia concept of a piano for personal use, which people can easily use at home, even if rooms are small. The PX-S1000 is the most compact digital piano in the world and unites purist design with a beautiful sound.

The new PX-S1000 in red is not only an outstanding digital piano, but also a real eye-catcher both on stage and at home, where it can give a unique touch.

Overview of the PX-S1000's top features:

About Privia

The Privia digital piano series was developed in 2000s with the aim of providing users with the advantages of a piano in a compact case while also offering an attractive price. CASIO also sought to improve the digital piano's performance in terms of sound and piano touch. The first Privia, the PX-100, was launched onto the market in October 2004. Since then, the Privia series has produced a lasting, positive effect on development of the digital piano market. CASIO is setting yet another significant milestone in 2019 with its new PX-S models.
